

Dear Editor,

In response to your devastating report showing the deadly state of air pollution in Sheffield, John Mothersole says, "We have taken action where necessary". Well any action that has been taken clearly hasn't worked one bit. East End Quality of Life has figures going back for years showing that to be true.

The Council seems to be sitting on such a high pile of visions, strategies, aspirations, recommendations, forward plans and ways ahead that its head must be in the clouds. If anything else were causing so many people to die, or so much illness and lost work and school days, crisis action would be underway.

So, come on Council, tell us what you are doing now and what you will do immediately to give us healthy air and by how much, and how quickly, you will bring these shameful figures down.

Ted Gunby